Mystery tales which have travelled to entertain, and travelled well. Jane Curry, an American novelist, bases her book on a factual event, the 1889 flood of Johnstown, Pennsylvania. Gordon Hatz has a bit of a reputation for his tall tales (he made the front page of the local paper for spotting a UFO which turned out to be a weather balloon), so it's not surprising that when extraordinary things do start happening he has trouble convincing anyone. Good read, easy flowing dialogue, with minimal problems in crossing the Atlantic.

Paul Jennings hit the jackpot with Unreal (Puffin) and here presents a similar set of nine short but surprising stories, under the apposite title of Unbelievable! These were originally published, by Puffin, in Australia, products of Jennings' ponderings while in his shower in Warrnambool. Definitely an acquired taste.
